DETAILED ACTION

Priority

1. Receipt is acknowledged of papers submitted under 35 U.S.C. 119(a)-(d), which papers have been placed of record in the file.

Specification

2. The title of the invention is not descriptive. A new title is required that is clearly indicative of the invention to which the claims are directed.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 102

3. The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless –

(b) the invention was patented or described in a printed publication in this or a foreign country or in public use or on sale in this country, more than one year prior to the date of application for patent in the United States.

4. Claims 1-3 and 5-8 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(b) as being anticipated by Tomoyuki (JP 11-176009). As per claim 1, Tomoyuki shows in figure 1 an optical pickup apparatus including an object lens 11 arranged to be opposed to an optical disk. Also shown in figure 1 is a bobbin 13 configured to support the object lens 11 and an intervention member 12 being interposed between the object lens 11 and the bobbin 13. Intervention member 12 is different from the bobbin 13 in thermal conductivity as described in the abstract of Tomoyuki.

As per claim 2, Tomoyuki discloses in the abstract that the intervention member 12 is larger in thermal conductivity than the bobbin 13. As per claim 3, Tomoyuki shows in figure 1 that the bobbin 13 includes a lens storing hole 13A with the intervention member 12 being disposed within the lens storing hole 13A in a manner to be in contact with an inner peripheral surface of the lens storing hole 13A. As per claim 5, Tomoyuki shows in figure 3B, for example, that the intervention member 12 includes an iris section (i.e. an aperture) configured to narrow incident light transmitted through the object lens 11.

As per claim 6, Tomoyuki shows in figure 3B that the intervention member 12 supports the object lens 11 to be in noncontact with the bobbin 13. As per claim 7, Tomoyuki shows in figure 1 a coil 25 disposed on the bobbin 13. As per claim 8, Tomoyuki shows in figures 1 and 11 an elastic member 31 and 32 configured to support the bobbin 13 in a suspending manner and a fixing section attached to one end of the elastic member 31 and 32.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

5. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

6. Claim 4 is rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Tomoyuki (JP 11-176009). Tomoyuki discloses the claimed invention. However, Tomoyuki is silent as to the intervention member including a groove formed on a surface and exposed outwardly.

It would have been obvious to a person having ordinary skill in the art at the time the invention was made to provide a groove in the intervention member of Tomoyuki. The rationale is as follows: one of ordinary skill in the art at the time the invention was made would have been motivated to provide a groove in an intervention member because the intervention member is positioned to provide thermal conductivity. Including grooves in a member that has thermal conductivity further enhances its properties because grooves increase the air flow.
